

AFTER BATH CLEAN UP

Now granted, raccoons are not known for their tidiness. But my mom made sure I learned this lesson early on. We all want to use a nice tidy bathroom, don't we? This is all about leaving the bathroom ready for the next person.

For your next four bath times, follow these instructions and get your parents approval after bath time.

LEVEL A88

1. Look at those towels. Who wants to use a wet towel that was left on the floor? So we hang up the towels afterwards, neatly spread out along the towel hanger so they can dry. Dirty towels need to go in the laundry.

2. Dirty clothes. That's not a good thing to leave on the floor, is it? All dirty clothes need to go into the dirty laundry hamper.

3. Water on the floor? Get that mopped up so someone doesn't slip and crack their head. Throw the towel you use for that in with the dirty laundry.

4. Clean out the tub, if you had a bath. Make sure there is not a scum line on that bath. Wipe it with a cloth and put that cloth into the laundry.

5. Bottles of shampoo and soap need their caps back on and need to be stored properly.

6. Take one more look. Anything else need attention to make this room perfect for the next person?

As a Trekker, we always want to leave things better than we found them. You go, Trailblazer. I bet you'll do great at this challenge.
