

CLEANING UP AFTERWARDS

Do you love doing stuff? I love doing stuff! Stuff, stuff, stuff. I love crafts, and making sandwiches, and I love playing with Legos, and I love flying my kite. I love doing stuff.

But you know what all the stuff has in common? It all requires cleaning up afterwards. In fact, as my dad says to me, “The job is not done and finished until everything has been put away.”

EARN THIS NUGGET

* For two weeks practice the art of cleaning up after yourself. Remember the job or activity is not done until everything has been put away.

* During this time, also make sure you don't start a new activity until you have cleared away the last.

If you don't clean up after yourself, then stuff gets lost, & gets broken. Food gets spoiled because it gets left out of the fridge. Frankly, not cleaning up is a totally un-Skill Trekker thing to do.

Whatever you are doing, when done clean up. It is even better with some things, like crafts or cooking, to clean up as you go along. Then there is less to clean up at the end.

When getting toys or games out, you don't get another thing out until the last thing is put away.

Always strive to leave things better than you found them. This way you'll live in a far better environment. Things will simply last longer and it'll also help everyone get along better.
