Try using a pros-cons list as part of three decisions over the next three weeks and share your work and decision with your parents.

It is called a pros-and-cons list. Often when we look at a situation, a purchase or whatever we are contemplating, it's hard to see the facts clearly. This list will really help to bring things into perspective.

- Make a two-column list.
- On the left, put your pros. All the good things about this decision.
- On the right, you will write all the cons or negatives.

Very quickly, common sense starts to reveal itself. This does not replace discussing decisions with your parents or praying about a situation, of course. Should I use a pros-and-cons list?

Pros	Cons
It will help me make a decision	I have to use a piece of paper
Smart people use it	I have not done one before
It is a good visual help for making decisions
It is quick
It will teach me a new skill

The right decision just seems to materialize before your eyes.
