

ROCK-PAPER-SCISSORS

There is a fun game that my brothers and I would play together. We would even use it to decide who would have the last cookie or something like that. It's a game called Rock-Paper-Scissors and just about anyone can play.

Play Rock-Paper-Scissors with a few different people and win ten times.

So first you have to learn the symbols. You know the shapes that you need to make your hands into.

A rock is where you bunch up your fist; paper is your hand flat; and scissors is your two fingers pointed out so that they look like scissors ready to cut.

- So rock wins against scissors because it will smash them, but loses against paper because paper can wrap the rock.

- Scissors lose against rock, as I said, but cuts the paper.

- If both of you choose the same thing, it's a tie and you go again. It's fun to try to guess what the other person is going to choose to try to beat them.

To play its normal to bunch your fist up like it's the rock and bring it down one, two, three. On the third time ,you reveal your shape.
