

TOY STORAGE

Okay, Trailblazer, you are super blessed to have all the toys and games that you do. When it comes time for cleanup, it's not quite as smooth as it needs to be. A place for everything and everything in its place was what my mom always used to say. I'm going to help you get there too.

- Sort out toys as laid out in the instructions with your parents help and cull out any broken or unwanted toys.
- Practice putting away a toy before you get out another one, and do this for three weeks.

So first of all, we need to find a place for everything. That means a box for the blocks, a bucket for the bricks, a bag for the whatever. But clearing up has not really been done when everything has just been piled into the closet and the door forced shut.

- With your parents help, find a special place, container, or box for every toy or set of toys.
- Let's use this time to get rid of any old toys that are broken or that you simply don't play with anymore. This would be a good opportunity to donate toys that are still good, but just not fun for you anymore.
- Now, here is the really important step, when you have finished playing with a toy, put it away, and then play with the next.

Do you realize if you put away the toy that you were playing with, before getting another one out, you'd never have to tidy your toys up again? How cool is that?
